

Universiteit
Leiden
The Netherlands

Deception, risk, and evasion: the politics of sovereign debt in emerging markets

Brown, K.J.

Citation

Brown, K. J. (2025, September 30). Deception, risk, and evasion: the politics of sovereign debt in emerging markets. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4262400>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4262400>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Deception, risk, and evasion: The politics of sovereign debt in emerging markets

Proefschrift

ter verkrijging van

de graad van doctor aan de Universiteit Leiden, op gezag van rector magnificus prof.dr.ir. H. Bijl, volgens besluit van het college voor promoties te verdedigen op 30 september 2025

klokke 10.00 uur

door

Kathleen June Brown

geboren te Albuquerque

1996

Promotor

Dr. M.R. DiGiuseppe

Co-promotors

Prof.dr. D. Thomas

Dr. R. van der Haer

Promotiecommissie

Prof.dr. B. Barendregt (Decaan Graduate School/voorzitter)

Prof.dr. J.J.M. van Holsteijn

Prof.dr. J.A. Scholte

Dr. V.J.C. de Koeijer

Prof.dr. S. Brooks (Department of Political Science, The Ohio State University)

Dr. H. Swedlund (Centre for International Conflict Analysis and Management, Radboud Universiteit)

Financieel ondersteund door

European Research Council

Instituut Politieke Wetenschap Universiteit Leiden

Acknowledgments

I began my PhD in the thick of the COVID-19 pandemic when camaraderie and advice mostly came from tiny, blurry squares on Zoom calls. Despite this rather lonely start, my PhD has been defined by generous support from many wonderful people. Thank you.

During the past five years, I have not only grown as a researcher, but also experienced wonderful changes outside of work: I put down roots here and became a Dutch citizen, I became a wife and a mother. I am so fortunate to have had support from people who value both my work and my personal life, and who have never asked me to sacrifice one for the sake of the other.

I am grateful for the invaluable guidance of my supervision team. I truly hit the jackpot with Matthew DiGiuseppe as my supervisor. He taught me how to ask interesting questions and always, always fought my corner. I will never forget his grace and empathy in my early days of parenthood, without which I would not have finished the PhD. Co-supervisor Roos van der Haer has been an incredible mentor from my first days as a PhD candidate, and I am so grateful for her wisdom on survival and success as a woman in academia. Co-supervisor Daniel Thomas showed me how to conduct research with real impact and gave me excellent advice on work (and life) after the PhD.

I am thankful for the wonderful community at the Institute of Political Science. First and foremost, I am greatly indebted to Alessia Aspide; a brilliant scholar, talented co-author, and an even better friend. Completing our PhDs together has been an adventure that I would never have survived without her. Many thanks as well to fellow PhDs, office-mates, and true friends Rick van Well and Elina Zorina. My work has benefited tremendously from feedback from colleagues including Babak RezaeeDaryakenari, Jonathan Phillips, Josh Robison, Adina Akbik, and Corinna Jentsch among others. I always felt respected, challenged, and welcome at the Institute, and I have loved my time working here.

I am thankful for the support and love of my family. To my parents and in-laws, for enduring many a rant about academia, and for serving as amusing anecdotes in my classes (usually without their knowledge). I am sorry that despite the PhD in political economy, I still cannot predict elections nor the stock market. To my wonderful husband Giel, who has been a constant source of support and comfort. For my son, Owen, and baby-on-the-way: this and everything I do is for you.