ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This research was made possible by many people and institutions. There are many to thank.

I want to thank my supervisory team. Janneke Wesseling, from beginning to end, your insistence on thorough understanding paired with precise articulation has underpinned this work and guided its direction. Florian Cramer, I am especially indebted to you for your steady focus on practice and your continuous encouragement to weave theory and practice together. This approach has been crucial for this project. Bart Verschaffel, I deeply appreciate your attentiveness to what I was after, even when you disagreed. Your often unexpected suggestions strengthened the project. I could not have wished for a better team. Your different backgrounds, expertise, and convictions, together with your generosity and commitment to art, artists and artistic research, helped me find my path and allowed this project to become what it is.

I was fortunate to develop this project within the generous PhDArts program, which allowed me to explore what artistic research can be, and what it can be for me. I am grateful to my fellow candidates for the inspiring moments we shared and for the openness with which they shared their processes. Thanks to the Royal Academy of Art, The Hague, and Leiden University, and in particular to the people of PhDArts and ACPA, for your care and support. Thank you to Anke Haarmann (director of PhDArts), Erik Viskil (academic director of the Academy of Creative and Performing Arts), Rosalien van der Poel (institute manager), Suzanne Knip-Mooij, Alice Twemlow, Anja Groten, Sven Lütticken, and Leon Lapa Pereira for making this possible.

I want to thank the Royal Academy of Art, The Hague, for giving me the time and support to carry out this research. I also want to thank the people working in the workshops for their help, and my students and colleagues in the BA Photography and the MA Photography & Society programs for showing me, again and again, why photography matters.

This project would not exist without those who participated in the photographic sessions. I owe special gratitude to Patricia Ardiles Vilegas, Daniëlle van Ark, Lynn Berger, Marianne Beuken, Janine Brogt, Marie-Hélène Cornips, Amber Delamar, Theo Huisman, Anna Klevan, Lindi Koroni, Fujū Leferink, Lou Keune, Marjolein Rothman, Eva van der Schans, Winnie Stomps, Barend Stomps, and Peter Wierenga.

Conversations about photography and artistic research were invaluable for this project. I want to express my appreciation to Daniëlle van Ark, Lynn Berger, Bernhard Kahrman, Annaleen Louwes, and Raimond Wouda. In particular, I want to thank Donald Weber for our endless chats about artistic research and photography, for holding landscape while I hold portraiture.

This dissertation was designed with the guidance of Vincent van Baar, whose precision and care are inspiring.

My gratitude further goes out to Stichting de Zaaier for their financial support.

I also want to thank my friends for bearing with me over all these years and for accepting that there was always some kind of deadline I needed to meet. I hope you're still here with me.

Finally, I owe much to my family for their encouragement and patience: José van IJken, for your trust and wisdom, and Kees van IJken, for embodying practice and critical thinking. To Marcel van Engelen, the love of my life, and to Winnie Stomps and Jeanne van Engelen, thank you for being who you are.

CURRICULUM VITAE

Judith van IJken (b. 1977) is a visual artist and researcher based in the Netherlands. Her work centers on photographic portraiture. Through an iterative, practice-led process of making and reflecting, she explores its role in contemporary society.

Van IJken graduated cum laude from the Department of Photography at HKU University of the Arts Utrecht in 2001, followed by a two-year residency at the Rijksakademie (Amsterdam) in 2003-2004. Her work has been widely exhibited in the Netherlands and abroad, including at Wereldmuseum (Rotterdam), Tropenmuseum (Amsterdam), the Benaki Museum (Athens), and Institut pour la Photographie (Lille). In addition to exhibitions, Van IJken has self-published several photobooks.

More recently, her practice has expanded to include writing and performative presentations. She has contributed to the Art of Research Conference 2023 (Helsinki), Helsinki Photomedia Conference 2024 (Helsinki), the International Conference of Photography and Theory (Cyprus), and Absence as Artistic Strategy in Contemporary Art 2025 (LUCAS, Leiden) as well as the journal Research in Art & Education.

Van IJken has taught workshops and lectured at international art institutions, among them the Chinese European Art Center (Xiamen), Parsons School of Design, The New School (New York), HKU University of the Arts Utrecht, and Aalto University (Helsinki). Since 2010, she has been a senior lecturer at the Royal Academy of Art, The Hague (KABK), where she teaches in the Bachelor's program Photography and the Master's program Photography & Society.
