

Universiteit
Leiden

The Netherlands

Unbefitting healing objects? Relations to health and protection among young middle class adults, indigenous healers and religious leaders in Dodoma, Tanzania

Petit, G.

Citation

Petit, G. (2026, February 12). Unbefitting healing objects?: Relations to health and protection among young middle class adults, indigenous healers and religious leaders in Dodoma, Tanzania. Retrieved from <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4290042>

Version: Publisher's Version

License: Licence agreement concerning inclusion of doctoral thesis in the Institutional Repository of the University of Leiden

Downloaded from: <https://hdl.handle.net/1887/4290042>

Note: To cite this publication please use the final published version (if applicable).

Curriculum Vitae

Gitty Petit (1977, Heerlen) spent part of her early childhood in Mukumu and Kakamega, Kenya, but has lived most of her life in Leiden, the Netherlands. She attended high school at the Bonaventura College (1989-1996) in Leiden. She obtained master's degrees in both Cultural Anthropology (1996-2002) and African Studies (2000-2002) at Leiden University. After her studies, she worked at the National Museum of Ethnology, Leiden University, and the African Studies Centre Leiden.

In 2013, Gitty embarked on a self-financed PhD trajectory at the African Studies Centre Leiden (ASCL), where she was also employed as a Project Manager, assisting and advising researchers on externally financed research projects. During her PhD, she was part of the Graduate Programme in African Studies and contributed to the establishment of the ASCL Collaborative Research Group on health. Additionally, she presented papers at the European Conference on African Studies (ECAS) in 2015 and in 2019, and completed multiple transferable-skills courses on academic writing, communication, and external funding.

Currently, Gitty works at the Leiden Academic Centre for Drug Research (LACDR), Leiden University, as a Finance Specialist for second- and third-stream funding.