Primary Sources

The following list of primary sources includes editions and translations. Editions and translations of ancient (i.e. pre-Byzantine) authors are only included if I cite them frequently or refer to a specific edition in my text. I have not always followed the translations I mention below; they are mainly included for the reader's information. Authors are listed by their family names, unless they are known by their first name (so, for example, Cyriac of Ancona is listed under Cyriac).

For the spelling of titles in modern Greek published after 1982 I used the monotonic accent system unless the author preferred polytonic accentuation. In addition, I included in square brackets English translations of titles in languages other than German, French, Italian, Spanish or Portuguese. After transliterated Greek family names I added the original Greek name for heuristic purposes.
