Acknowledgments

Parties get reshaped under pressure. So do projects and people.

Completing the project I started six years ago has not always been easy. Luckily, on the journey from proposal to defence you meet a lot of people who help out. First, there was professor Ingrid van Biezen, who consented to help me write a proposal. I owe my supervisors Ruud Koole and Maria Spirova a great thank-you for their frank feedback and elephantine patience. Scientifically, the feedback of my colleagues, especially fellow “party person” Nienke Bos, and Prof. Airo Hino and colleagues at the PhD Summer School was also invaluable. Tim Mickler helped me in another major way by helping me learn LaTeX.

For a PhD student under pressure, the support on the home front is invaluable as well. I would like to thank my family first of all. My mother and father, of course, for their continuing support and hospitality. But also my grandfather, who is sorely missed at the defence. I would like to thank the USKO for all the music and my friends for their friendship. I would also like to thank Severin, Sophie, Marjon and Marjolein for their support in keeping my life moving along and my home liveable. In the same vein, Dr. Yvette Dijkxhoorn deserves credit for providing the same support at work. And sometimes, a new environment helps: I would like to thank the Friars Minor of Megen for their hospitality and their conversation when I needed some peace, quiet and inspiration to write.

I never expected how many nice and helpful people I would meet during my data collection. At the CDA, there’s then-party chairman Ruth Peetoom, Jelle Gaemers at the National Archives, my interview respondents from my master thesis, the former executive members who donated their files and Karin Hoentjen, whose belief in my project made it possible to secure access to the archives. For the D66 archives, my thanks go out to Berend de Boer at the DNPP and Jessica Hoogenboom at party HQ. My research on the Labour Party was made possible (and enjoyable) by the staff at the Churchill Archives Centre, as well as Darren Treadwell and his colleagues at the Labour History Archive and Study Centre. Finally, for the Liberal Party I have the staff at the LSE reading room to thank.

Thank you all (even those I didn’t mention) for your invaluable support!
